Action In The Dark

—by—

SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

General Marshall, Admiral Halsey and other highly respected war leaders say that we are losing "all conception of world responsibility," and falling into "a deadly state of apathy toward national defense."

If this is true, whose fault is it? These officers and their Commander-in-Chief should read the recent address of G. O. P. Chairman Herbert Brownell, showing how far the people and their Congress have been blacked-out from all "conception of world responsibility."

Former Secretary of State Hull once said that American foreign policy is, at the last, made by the people. Right. But what sort of foreign policy can they make in the dark?

It is a foreign policy of apathy. If the people are to have a concept of their world responsibility, our leaders must take them into their confidence. They must give them the facts.

"Secret covenants secretly arrived at" is established procedure today. Why should the people get a sweat over matters that they know nothing about—that are deliberately concealed from them? Almost two years after the event, does anyone know the terms of the Italian armistice?

Four years after the event, we learn that months before Pearl Harbor we were building landing fields and delivering bombs and gasoline in Australia, Borneo and Malaysia. While pretending to be at peace, we were arming foreign countries, which was an act of war. "Your boys are not going to be sent to fight on foreign soil," at the bombs were sent. Bombs sent men next. More attention to arming American soil, Hawaii and the Philippines, might have paid better dividends.

Japan, no doubt, knew all about our arming Dutch and British possessions in the Far East. Mr. Churchill also knew. That fact no doubt explains his statement in the House of Commons on January 27, 1942: "I will explain how very deliberately we walked and how very careful I was that we should not be exposed single-handed to this onslaught," and then he went on to say: "On the other hand, the probability since the Atlantic Conference at which I discussed these matters with President Roosevelt, at the United States, even if not myself attacked, would come into the war in the Far East and thus."

FULL-SCALE WAR IS IN 'MAKING' IN NORTHERN CHINA

Situation Already Complicated by Continued Communist Charges

'JAP' TRIALS CONTINUE

New Evidence of Wilful Slaying of Downed U. S. Airmen Compiled

By International News Service
A full-scale war appeared in the making today in North China. Chinese Communist sources reported that Central Government troops launched an offensive designed to crash through into Manchuria.

Results of a conference scheduled for today between U. S. Lt. Gen. Albert G. Wedemeyer and high-ranking Chinese officers were awaited for possible developments in the turbulent internal situation. The situation already was complicated by continued Communist charges that American forces were aiding Central Government troops in fighting in some sectors of the 11 provinces where clashes continued.

Gen. Wedemeyer admitted that a few clashes have taken place in North China between Marines and Communist forces.

"Nature" is Subject of Exchange Club Speaker

James C. Steen, teacher of biology in Bristol high school, was the guest speaker last evening at the Bristol Exchange Club meeting. He began by saying that he was in a dilemma similar to the "hand" who was hired by the farmer. The "hand" was overcome by the decisions he had to make when sorting potatoes. Mr. Steen felt that he, too, was most overcome when trying to select a few items upon the great subject, "Nature," for the evening's entertainment.

Birds, snakes, dogs, leaves, feeding of white rats and Galapagos Homesteaders were some of the nature subjects discussed. The cowbird and turtle dove proved to be of much interest. Taming of snakes and vitamin feeding of the homesteaders aroused much interest also. Mr. Steen consented to return to the interested group of men again and speak upon "The Migration of Birds."

Among the guests present were Burgess Schmidt, an honorary member of the club; former president Horace Schmidt, who recently returned from Europe; David Landroth, Clarence Young and Ensign Harry Fisher. One of the largest turnouts of the membership in months was present.

Copies of a poem titled, "Nature" were distributed to the guests and members by the speaker.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Dr. Rudolph Binder, formerly of New York University, was the guest speaker at the meeting of New Hope Women's Club at the home of Mrs. Edith Fell, at New Hope.

Introduced by Mrs. Charles Janney, a representative of the health and welfare committee, Dr. Binder based his talk on the teaching of Paul that if one member of the body is diseased or crippled, all of the rest of the body will suffer.

In a like manner, said Mr. Binder, if poverty, tyranny or injustice prevail in any part of the world, all the people in the world will be infected. Social miseries and conflicts, said Mr. Binder, cannot be quarantined, but will spread throughout the whole fabric of society.

The New Hope-Solebury Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association has decided to serve the children hot soup during the lunch period.

"ADAPT OR PERISH" IS ADVICE FROM WELLS

Mankind Faces Terrific Task of Adapting To A Changing Cycle

TRACES DEVELOPMENT

(Editor's Note: "Adapt or perish" is the admonition to the world by H. G. Wells, noted historian and writer, in what he declares is his final literary testament.)

(Mr. Wells contends that we live in a faded world, a world filled with a great mental confusion, and that mankind has on its hands the terrific task of adapting to a changing cycle or giving way to a new and more qualified form of life.)

By H. G. Wells
(Distributed by International News Special Service)

(World Copyright by H. G. Wells)
LONDON, Nov. 9.—(INS)—The human individual lives to a very great age, when measured by the lives of the creatures about him. The radium clock gives us a maximum period far less than ten, probably far less than five thousand million terrestrial years for the career of life.

During all this period there has been a constant succession of forms dominating the scene. Each has been thrust aside, superseded by some form better adapted to the changing circumstances of life.

Each has obeyed certain inescapable laws that seemed to be the very nature of things. The first of these laws was imperative to aggression. The flat was to live, and to live as abundantly as possible. The creed was to live more than your brothers, grow larger, devour more.

In the earlier days this imperative was unqualified by any impulse to mutual aid against the common competitor. So the big individuals ate up the food of the small ones, even if they did not actually eat them and grew larger and larger.

In the record books it is always the gigantic individuals who appear at the end of each chapter.

The planet spins, climate changes, and so old and overgrown is the lord of creation that he is no longer in harmony with his surroundings. Go he must. Usually, but not always, some entirely different form of life succeeds him. Or like sharks, he may dwindle in numbers until the food supply overtakes him and then if nature did not contrive an alternative in the meanwhile, he may return to a former abundance.

Sharks and their kind live and die violently, and nothing is left of them to fossilize. We know of huge contemporary basking sharks and they may have grown to their present bigness quite recently, or may have basked for ages—or as long as there were sufficient fishes to be devoured. We are left guessing.

The present writer is his 79th year has lived cheerfully. He has warmed both hands at the fire of life, and now as it sinks towards meticulous individualism he is ready to depart. He awaits his end watching mankind still keen and finds it helpful to use his accumulations and experience in this time of mental confusion.

The writer sees the world as a faded world, devoid of recuperative power. In the past he liked to think that man could pull out his entanglements and start a new creative phase of human living. In the face of our universal inadequacy that optimism has given place to a stoical cynicism. Many must go up or down steeply, and the odds seem all in favor of his going down and out.

If he goes up then so great is the adaptation demanded of him

W. C. T. U. SESSION

The Women's Christian Temperance Union will meet Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Frank Lehman, 315 Radcliffe street, at eight o'clock.

THE BURDEN OF VICTORY

The Republican Party on Tuesday won a hard-fought election victory in Bristol by a handsome majority which represented a 1200-vote turnover from last year's results.

The ratio of Republican votes here—around 56 1/2%—was higher than many other industrial centers in which the campaign line-up was similar to Bristol.

In such communities, the candidates which were listed on the ballots as "Democrats" were largely hand-picked by the CIO organization, and the active campaigning was done by representatives of the CIO-controlled PAC.

While the candidates themselves usually were long-time residents of the communities in which they ran, behind them were many figures new to the areas, as well as strong influences from entirely outside. In many cases, the candidates were young and inexperienced, both in politics and administration.

The campaigns of the PAC harped throughout on two points: first, a "larger voice" in public affairs for the working man—meaning, naturally, the CIO union leaders; second, fault-finding with respect to incumbent administrations, often on obscure and basically unimportant points.

In extremely few cases did the PAC spokesmen dwell on matters of public finance, although many of their promises and criticisms unmistakably pledged them to far higher administrative spending if elected.

It is of much importance to Republicans to see the point in these lessons. In Bristol, for example, Tuesday's vote was not "just another election." That it was won at all shows that the PAC, for all its much-advertised strength, can be beaten decisively wherever the Republican Party is able and willing to go directly to the people with a good record of performance at reasonable costs.

But the size of the minority vote is disturbing. About 1700 Bristol men and women voted for an untied and inexperienced group of men, the nerve-center of whose campaign was in the CIO national headquarters, as against an experienced and competent ticket with an excellent record.

For so many citizens to be willing to run what appears to be, from at least one point of view, a serious risk of confusion in public affairs and waste of public money, argues strong feelings on their part.

It is in the analysis of these reasons that the most constructive future guidance for the Republican Party is to be found.

Part of the incentive for the opposition campaign is obvious enough—the eagerness of new political groups to take over; a willingness to gamble on a long-shot.

But while this spirit accounted for the zeal displayed by the CIO-PAC workers, especially on election day, it does not explain the fact that they were able to bring out so large a number of votes in their behalf.

Nor is the somewhat far-fetched labor issue the answer. Nowhere near all of the Democratic votes were cast by labor union members; it takes little analysis to prove this. For one thing, the PAC went after and got the votes of many housewives who had no connection with union activities.

One of the other answers is that several hundred

Send That Donation At Once For The War Fund

With returns from the drive for the Pennsylvania War Fund in this area being far below the quota of $32,000, a strong plea is made for residents to send donations at once to the secretary-treasurer, William Winslow, Jr., c/o Bristol Trust Co.

This is the last week for the drive for funds which supports the NSO centers, and affiliated agencies, and provides many comforts for the men in the service.

A large sum is required to bring the amount for this area up to the full quota, and an urgent appeal is made for financial assistance.

John H. Brehm is in charge of the drive, he being named by Robert W. Bracken Post of the American Legion to organize the drive.

OKINAWA (Delayed), Nov. 9.—Arnold Frederic North, carpenter's mate, third class, 340 Jefferson avenue, Bristol, Pa., who served with the 125th U. S. Naval Construction Battalion, played an important part in the final drive that helped bring Japan to her knees.

The outfit was one of the Seabee units responsible for the rapid development of this Ryukyus island into a formidable base. The 125th arrived just one day after the fighting had been officially declared ended and, within a few days, its members were helping complete the Awashi airstrip.

Two weeks later the battalion moved to Yonabaru to begin work on the airfield originally started by the Japs.

MAJORITY FAVOR SCHOOL TIME FOR RELIGION

Parents To Be Further Questioned About Instruction Outside of School

NOT LEGAL IN SCHOOL

School Board Signs Contract With J. M. Blew & Son, Architects

A majority of parents of children in grades one to seven inclusive in the Bristol public schools favor the school board granting time for religious instruction. There are some opposed to using school time and some object to having the instruction given in the school building while others approve.

This was revealed last night at a meeting of the school board when the result of a religious education survey was announced.

Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of schools, informed the board that as instructed he had mailed a questionnaire to the parents of the children. Answers were received from approximately 95 per cent.

The questions and the number responding follows:

1. I believe the school board should grant one hour of school time per week for religious instruction, to those who desire it.

2. I do not approve of giving any part of the school day for religious instruction.

If the school board would grant one hour per week for religious instruction and you were one of those favoring it, answer the following:

3. Religious instruction should not be given in the school building.

4. I approve of giving religious instruction in the building.

1. Board should grant time—553.

2. Opposed to using school time—189.

3. Opposed to using school building—243.

4. Approve using school building—431.

Mr. Snyder further reported that since making the survey he had attended a meeting in Philadelphia at which Dr. Paul L. Cressman, Department of Public Instruction, stated that according to a strict interpretation of the school code, it was not legal to hold religious instruction in the school buildings.

The Board instructed Mr. Snyder to further question the parents of the children as to their wishes in permitting the children to go elsewhere for the instruction.

The Rev. Paul Baird, St. Mark's Church, and the Rev. Peter Pincel, St. Ann's church, attended the meeting last night and discussed the subject with the board members.

Rev. Baird informed the Board that application had been made to the Public Service Commission for transportation privileges.

ATOMIC HUBBLE

If the United States, China and Switzerland jointly had developed the atomic bomb, the rest of the world would take it for granted that the governments of those three countries would consult among themselves before making any commitments as to letting other nations share the secret. If any other principal had asked to sit in on such consultations, the three governments concerned would have replied in effect: "This is a private conference. If there is a public meeting later, we shall let you know."

It happens that the atomic bomb was developed by the United States, with Great Britain and Canada assisting. Prime Minister Attlee of Great Britain and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada will visit Washington in several days for the purpose of discussing with President Truman the problem of controlling this invention to keep it from destroying civilization. And already—not in Russia's satellite countries, but in the United States and Great Britain—demands are being made that Stalin, too, must be invited to that conference.

Indeed, a Labor member of the House of Commons directly suggested to Attlee that Stalin be asked in, and more insistent suggestions to the same effect may be expected from circles in this country which have been sources of the propaganda for letting Russia (but apparently none of Russia's continental European neighbors) in on the atomic secret.

It is not only proper but highly desirable that Messrs. Truman, Attlee and King proceed precisely as the world would have expected Truman and the heads of the Chinese and Swiss governments to proceed if China and Switzerland, instead of Britain and Canada, had assisted in developing the atomic bomb.

And, in any event, would it not be too much to expect Stalin to come all the way to Washington merely to be told the atomic bomb secret? Would not he expect Truman and Attlee to carry the secret to him?

Hen Wallace says full employment is needed badly to offset drop in national income. Will this statement result in Hen becoming the ex-hero of the strikers?

For the education of Europeans, if any, who have not learned what war is, one hundred million dollars' worth of K-rations are to be sent over.

A great moral debt is due Britain for standing alone, says a London official. And to America, which didn't have much company on Guadalcanal.

Perhaps Uncle Sam is proceeding on the theory that if loans to European nations are made at minute interest rates, he will not lose so much.

The right to eat without working is now regarded as pure democracy in some circles.

make the final victory assured, seemed to allay some of the anxieties, and that expectation has not been falsified by the events."

Were the American people committed to war by Mr. Roosevelt before Pearl Harbor, as Mr. Churchill implies? That is something to which they want the answer.

"The current philosophy that, 'Thou shalt not reason why, thou shalt do or die,' is foreign to everything American. Besides asking the American people to fight blindfolded, it abrogates the power of Congress to declare war and of the Senate to ratify or reject treaties."

Will there, in fact, be any peace treaty? Or will boundaries be drawn, spheres of influence grabbed, indemnities carted away, and millions of people uprooted and handed over to new masters by executive agreement secretly arrived at?

Years hence, the dead formality of a peace treaty may be gone through with. But the vital and irreversible decisions will have been made as in Poland and eastern Europe.

We may be permitted the mummery of peace treaties long after the event. But they will be like continuing to inscribe the famous symbol S. P. Q. R. (the Senate and the Roman people) on monuments and battle flags long after the Roman republic had dissolved in the acid of Empire, when neither the people nor the Senate were consulted about anything.

General Marshall and Admiral Halsey: You deserve our confidence and we deserve yours. Assert the right of the American people to know the facts from which they can determine their responsibilities.

SAMUEL B. PETTINGILL.

"Adapt Or Perish" Is Advice From Wells

that he must cease to be man.

Ordinary man is at the end of his tether and only a small highly adaptable minority of the species can possibly survive—the rest will not trouble about it, finding such opiates for consolation as they have mind for.

Let us conclude this speculation about the final phase of the history of life by surveying the modifications of the human type that are in progress today. The primates appeared as forest creatures related to groups of insectivora. They commenced as arboreal creatures. They acquired quickness of eye and muscular adjustment along the branches; they were sociable and flourished widely.

Then as usual increase in size, weight and strength occurred and they descended perforce to ground level, big enough now to outface, fight and outwit larger carnivores of the forest world. Their semi-erect attitude enabled them to rear up and beat their antagonists with sticks, and the unheard-of enhancement of tooth and claw. But presently their sociability diminished because they now needed wide areas for food supply.

The little fellows faded out before the big fellows according to the time-honored pattern of life. The great apes developed the institution of private family to a high level. Along this line they travelled to gorilla, chimpanzee, and orangutan of today.

But outside the forest regions, during the phase of forest recession the developing primates were exposed to other exactions. The grass plains and arid steppes spread out. The supply of vegetables and food shrank, small game meat generally became an increasingly important part of the dietary. As ever, there was an alternative. "Adapt or perish."

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
At four o'clock, they reluctantly dressed, repacked the hamper and left the grove, to drive out to the country, toward the Spartalini truck farm.
"You'll like the old lady," Gail assured Steve. "She's a wonderful creature!"
Mrs. Spartalini was that, greeting them with almost queenly grace and courtesy. Gail and Steve sat at the big wooden table in the kitchen and ate pizza and drank wine and joked with the innumerable Spartalini sons and daughters and grandchildren. Then while Dominick, the eldest son, took Stephen for a tour around the truck farm, Gail talked to Mrs. Spartalini.
"Do you ever see Carman?" she asked.
"No. Not in a long time, doctor."
"You know, Mrs. Spartalini," Gail said earnestly, "I wish that somehow your family could take care of the child, Nina."
"Nina is not one of us, doctor." She was again the matriarch, rigid and unforgiving. Her granddaughter Carman no longer belonged to the family, nor did Carman's child.
When Gail and Stephen were ready to leave, the old woman said approvingly, "You make a good choice, doctor. This is a good man."
"You see," Stephen said smugly as they drove off, "it takes an outsider to appreciate me!"
And when they reached the house, he took her hand in his. "This has been a perfect day," he said quietly. "I'll remember it, forever."
"Why . . . why, so will I," Gail agreed.
She left the empty hamper in the hall, and went into the living room still feeling relaxed and melted from sun and wind and the quiet, lovely day.
And then she realized that Burke Gentry was sitting on the blue sofa, waiting for her.
He stood up, big and handsome in his dark blue suit, his white shirt and bright tie. He said curtly, "I've been here a long time, Gail."
"Good heavens, Burke!" she exclaimed, laughing. "You sound like an irate husband!"
"I rang you at noon, Kate," said you'd gone for the day—but she expected you about four."
"Katie knew I'd be later than that," Gail retorted. "I had my calls switched to Doctor Bonine today—so I would be free. Besides, I didn't expect you. You're always with your mother Sundays."
"Well, I had to see you today. It's important."
She went over to the mirror and regarded herself impersonally. Despite the lotion she had so carefully applied, her nose was burned.
"What's important, Burke?"
"Simply this. Doctor McCormick is going to sue Reyna Thayer."
"I know all about it," she said. "Reyna told me."
"She did, did she?" He strode over to face her. "Stop admiring yourself in the mirror. I said this was important. Do you realize what it'll mean if they go through with it?"
"Of course. Choice morsels for a minor scandal."
"It's not likely to be so minor. A case like this has never before come up in Beauchamp. No one in this town has ever questioned McCormick's ability or his integrity. And you may not realize it, but Reyna is pitting you against him—"
"How?"
"She's going to prove, by quoting you, that he didn't know his business; that you knew his orders for medication were wrong; and that you'd gone ahead on your own. And saved her! Listen, Gail, if this mess is aired in court, you'll be called on the witness stand. You'll—"
"Burke—" she caught his arm, her voice tense. "How do you know so much—about this?"
"How? Because Cassius McCormick has retained our firm as his lawyers, and I've been picked to handle the case," Burke said.
Gail stared at him, horror-stricken, unbelieving.
"And you're going to?"
Burke's blue eyes regarded her coolly. "Of course I am. It's my job—and I've got to do my best." Your best, Burke. But what in the world will it do to me? Gail thought.
Gail knocked on the door, and after a moment Carman Sermalino opened it. She was wearing a soiled housecoat; her hair was awry, and the rouge smeared on her bold lips.
"Come in, doc," she said. "Nina's been askin' me when the doc's comin' for a visit."
"This is the first chance I've had in weeks except once when no one was here," Gail said, putting her package on the table. The living room gave evidence of Joanny Sermalino's wartime prosperity; new overstuffed furniture and a large radio. But it was messy and disorganized, like Carman herself.
"Where is Nina?" Gail asked.

THE BURDEN OF VICTORY

citizens of Bristol were resentful over real or fancied dissatisfaction with the Borough's services.

That this is true is a matter both of public record and of public information.

The causes of friction are matters of secondary importance, in the long run, to the overall problem of running the Borough reasonably well and at reasonable tax costs; but if they loom in voters' minds as of sufficient importance to create opposition votes, it would be a mistake not to make a serious attempt to correct them.

Some already have been corrected—the upkeep of the Canal and Silver Lake, which was widely blamed on Borough Council, although really a state matter; the ragged condition of some street; and other such matters.

Others will always be difficult problems, since they involve private as well as public rights—the condition of sidewalks, uncut weeds, etc.

In still others, the question appears to be the alertness and efficiency of Borough services in responding promptly to specific complaints.

If, as the vote seems to indicate, there is a feeling on the part of a segment of Bristol that still further improvement from the inevitable war-time let-down is needed, the new Administration is fully pledged to make this one of its first orders of business. As a political proposition, to do otherwise would be a mistake.

On the whole, both Bristol's citizens and the Republican Party have every reason to be pleased with the outcome.

But both must recognize that the victory gives each group specific responsibilities for the future.

The burden of the Republican administration will be to run the Borough's affairs so that they will be satisfactory to the entire community.

The burden upon Bristol's men and women is to give sympathetic support and encouragement to their officials in all proper attempts to meet their various public responsibilities, regardless of any differences of opinion which the recent campaign may have developed.

Under a spirit of unity and co-operation, Bristol should be in an excellent position to move forward into a happy future.

This star will be placed on his unit's first award, the Service Plaque, received for similar outstanding performance on Leyte. under observation and treatment at Frankford Hospital for a period of two weeks, returning to her home two weeks ago where she died this morning at 4:15.

She had a host of friends, and was known to countless individuals, she having come in contact with many from this area during her work as real estate assessor for Bristol Twp., school enumerator for the township, and likewise during her exceedingly active service in various organizations and in relief work.

Born in Philadelphia Mrs. Frederick with her husband moved to Croydon in 1924. She was the daughter of the late Frederick and Anna Curtis. For a number of years she resided on State Road, the Fredericks moving to Wyoming avenue near State Road 1½ years ago.

The deceased was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Philadelphia; Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women of which organization she was at one time president; member of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks Co. with headquarters at Buckingham; and was affiliated with the Daughters of Naomi and the Daughters of Liberty, Philadelphia.

She had served for some time as real estate assessor for Bristol Twp.; was formerly enumerator of school children; and for 21 years had been committeewoman for the Croydon area. She was very active and interested in political work; had given much time and effort to the Bristol Branch of the American Red Cross; and several years ago gave many months of work in assistance to those on relief rolls during the depression. She was a former secretary of Bristol Branch of the Red Cross.

The service will be conducted on Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the late home of the deceased, Wyoming avenue. Burial in Belyue Cemetery, Philadelphia, will be in charge of Robert C. Ruehl, funeral director. Friends may call Sunday evening.

Today's Quiet Moment

By Rev. T. Kohlmeier
Pastor
St. Luke's Lutheran Church
Croydon

At the end of another school week, we pray to Thee, dear Lord, to bless the efforts and work of teachers and pupils in all our schools. Let the education that is given in our schools be free from any and all tenets that would be subversive to good citizenship and sound government. May all education be used not only for personal gain or national improvement, but above all, to the glory of God. Teach us to use the reason and senses Thou hast given us to learn more of Thee, particularly also in the Person of Thy Son, our Savior Jesus Christ. Amen.

BRISTOL HIGH TO ATTEMPT TO WIN IN GAME TOMORROW

Bunnies Will Meet P. S. for D. at Mt. Airy Tomorrow Afternoon

OPPONENTS ARE WEAK

Mt. Airy Boys Have Had A Bad Season, But Lost Games Were Close

Bristol High will attempt to jump into the win column tomorrow afternoon when it meets the Pennsylvania School for Deaf at Mount Airy. Last week, the Bunnies lost to Burlington High and at the present time have won and lost three games, playing a tie in the other.

The Deaf School is having a bad season, having beaten Bensalem for its only victory of the season. Although most of their scores have been close, the Mt. Airy boys can not give their stars, Huntsinger and Schickman, enough help to climb up wins.

In playing the Deaf School, Bristol will have an idea of how it will shape up against Morrisville. The Bulldogs beat the P. S. D. lads, 15-7.

The Bensalem Owls will be shooting for their third straight win tomorrow as it meets George School on the Cornwells Heights field.

Coach John Bixler's boys have hit their stride and last week defeated Fallsington in a close game. The week previous saw the Owls topple Southampton, 33-0.

The Owls will be comparing their score of this game as that of Langhorne. Langhorne scored a 12-6 win over George School early in the season. The Redskins and Owls have an annual Thanksgiving Day game.

Sportsmen's Briefs

BY JOE ELBERSON

More notes on small game season... reports from every section of the County were heard Monday evening when delegates to the Bucks County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs met in Doylestown. Among the observations made were: not too many hen birds seen; hunting not up to expectations in many sections; cover too heavy yet for best hunting; distribution of pheasants seemed spotty; fewer runners afield first day in lower end of the county; several foxes killed in the upper end of the county; rabbits plentiful and in good shape; game hard to start; better hunting to be expected when the cover is down a little more.

Biggest yet... when the balance of the largemouth bass arrived from the Fish Commission's Bellefonte hatchery Tuesday evening at Silver Lake they proved to be the finest bass ever stocked in public waters in this area.

There were 100 bass in the shipment. This completes the allotment of 500 for this year. An equally fine shipment of 100 bass was placed in the Lake on October 27th. Many of the fish dumped in Tuesday evening were legal size bass, and very few were under six inches in length.

Date to remember... next Tuesday evening, November 13, the final meeting of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association will be held for this year. The meeting will start at 8:30 o'clock in the Old Fellows' Hall. All sportsmen have a cordial invitation to be on hand.

Seventy pounds of walleyes... this was the catch reported by three fishermen who fished at New Hope in the Delaware two weeks ago. Their total catch of walleyed pike weighed 70 pounds, with the largest fish tipping the scales at slightly over 7 pounds. That's the kind of a trip I would like to get in on myself!

Sold out... both the Auto Boys and Diamond Sporting Goods, local outlets for Pennsylvania Hunting licenses, were sold out before the opening of small game season, and wires to the Commission at Harrisburg for additional licenses did not get more back to the stores in time for opening day. To date the two stores have sold a total of slightly over 1400 resident hunting licenses. And both stores now have a new supply on hand.

Avoid $25.00 penalties... the following "don'ts" are listed in the Hunting Regulations booklet published by the Game Commission:

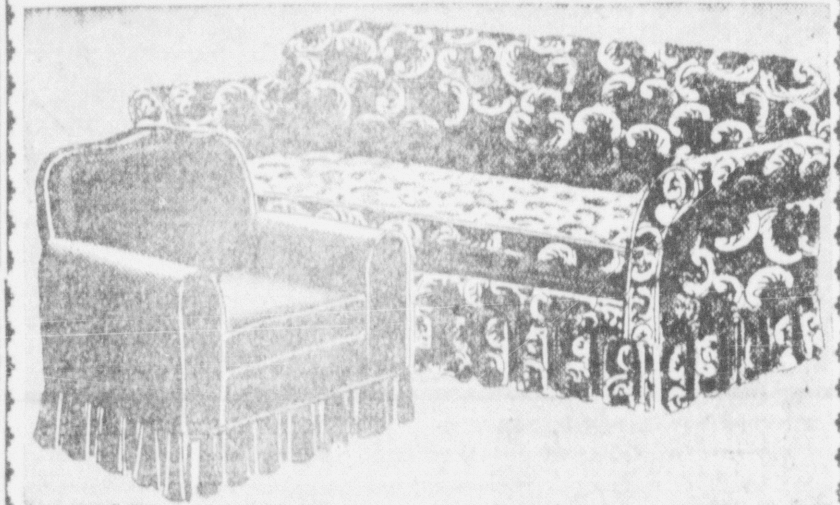

"Do not shoot at game upon or across highways."

"Do not shoot or discharge any firearm or other deadly weapon within 150 yards of any occupied dwelling, or other buildings connected therewith, without the specific permission of the owner or tenant."

"Do not disturb the trap of another."
